

The Standard.

ESTABLISHED 1870.

An Independent Newspaper, published every evening except Sunday, without a muzzle or a club.

EDITOR AND PREACHER WITH MESSAGES.

Some weeks ago an extract from a sermon delivered by J. E. Carver was published in the Standard. It contained the story of a southern man in Kansas City and the honor of a southern man in the south. Rev. Mr. Carver secured the story from the Kansas City Journal. The Standard has been given a very wide publicity through that extract, the southern papers have copied it widely and many papers from southern states have been sent to the reverend gentleman. The last of these papers came from a little county seat in Florida.

An editor, like a preacher, never knows how far his words will go. The whole world may be reached through one well-written editorial or article. Editors and preachers ever have before them a field as wide as their talent demands.

HEALTHFUL AND CLEAN IS OGDEN.

Ogden never received better advertising than the following which appeared in the last issue of the Youth's Companion:

The City Baby's Chances.—No community that has an infant mortality rate of more than 50 can maintain that its babies are getting anything like a square deal. That is the statement of the New York Milk Committee. It means, of course, an annual death rate of 50 in every 1000. The committee has prepared a statistical bulletin that shows the infant mortality rates in 144 American cities. According to the figures, only four of the cities are giving the babies "a square deal." They are La Crosse, Wisconsin (30.6); Ogden, Utah (39.8); Omaha, Nebraska (47.1); and East Orange, New Jersey (48.8). Some of the cities with the highest infant death rates are Passaic, New Jersey (193.5); Montgomery, Alabama (185.1); and Nashville, Tennessee (182.3). No city with a population of 200,000 or over has an infant death rate so high as those just given, nor, on the other hand, has any of them a rate below 50. The lowest rates among cities of that size are those of Seattle, Washington (53.1), and Portland, Oregon (57.7). The highest are those of Jersey City (132.9) and Indianapolis (131.6). In commenting on the figures, the Journal of the American Medical Association says that the condition that cause those high rates may be remedied by any community that is determined not to tolerate such a waste of infant life. If only six babies in the Borough of Manhattan were to be killed or even threatened with death by a bomb from an aeroplane, the country would be aflame with indignation. An observer from Mars might find the fact curious when contrasted with the calm unconcern with which we regard conditions that doom thousands of infants in this country to death.

The Youth's Companion is a periodical of wide circulation, entering the best homes of the land. To have that publication proclaim the fact that Ogden is one of four cities in the United States giving the babies "a square deal" is publicity almost certain to emphasize that Ogden as a home city has no superiority.

What is good for the babies must be conducive to the health of the grown-ups. So Ogden has a right to claim to be one of the most healthful cities in the United States. To rank as one of four cities in life-preserving forces is to gain a distinction much greater than to be rated as the cleanest of cities, because to be thoroughly healthful, a city must be clean, not only to the eyes of an inspector, but pure in every hidden recess; must be clean, not only outwardly, but inwardly.

On the back of the hundreds of thousands of letters which go out of Ogden each month should be this slogan:

"Ogden, a city where even the babies get a square deal; one of four cities in the United States where infant mortality is not excessive!"

WHO WILL MAKE THE BEDS.

The question has been asked, "Who will make beds and cook meals in Europe, after the war?" This interrogation is prompted by the fact that millions of women have deserted the kitchen to go out to labor.

The women are in munition factories, on the farms, and elsewhere. They have become streetcar conductors, motormen, machinists, printers, and even blacksmiths. We are told they have discovered a new sense of their capabilities and enjoy the independence of away-from-home work at good pay, and they will be slow to go back to old conditions. One writer says:

"Woman's place," we have been told a good many times, "is in the home." Is that always so? One parliamentary statement recently alleged that 300,000 women in Great Britain are now holding jobs that before the war were indisputably for men alone. Others have placed the number as high as a million. In Germany the number is greater, by all accounts, even in proportion to the population. These calculations, it is understood, do not consider the armies of women all over Europe who are doing farm work they did not perform under normal conditions. After the war the world will have to face the fact that woman occupies a new place in its scheme."

POTASH FROM THE KELP BEDS.

Utah is supplying part of the potash of the United States, but the demands for a greater output are so great that the government is to experiment with the treating of the great kelp, or seaweed, of the Pacific coast. An appropriation of $175,000 for this purpose has been included in the agricultural bill. When dried kelp contains 16 per cent potash. An eastern authority on his subject says:

"Some private concerns are already producing potash from it, and a few years ago there was some hope among optimists that this supply could be made to reduce the price that the German syndicate charges for its potash. "There is not so much optimism, in view of experience; but, nevertheless, if German supplies are shut off much longer a considerable part of our normal needs will likely be supplied from kelp, and from the alga deposits in Utah, which produce 10 to 12 per cent of potash on proper treatment. These deposits have been found much more extensive than was formerly supposed, and are beginning to be worked."

GIRL OF GREAT NORTHWEST BECOMES PHOTOPLAY STAR

Early in her youth, Florence LaBadie, star of the Pathé Gold Rooster play, "The Fugitive," which is to begin an engagement at the Utah theater today and tomorrow, decided to become a great actress. That decision made, the thing was settled, for she is a girl of determination. She besieged the booking agencies and finally obtained a part with Chauncey Olcott, in "Ragged Robin."

A season in pictures on the Pacific Coast made her a confirmed film enthusiast. No longer did she want to appear in the speaking drama. She returned to her home in New York and began to besiege the picture studios. One day she applied to the Thanhouser studio. Mr. Edwin Thanhouser saw her and told her that if he should need her he would send for her. Miss LaBadie had heard that before. That night Mr. Thanhouser attended a theatre and there saw Miss LaBadie in a Biograph picture. "There is a girl who will make a great actress," he said to his casting director the next morning. "Get her." She has been with Thanhouser ever since.

Weber County Oil Co. Will Boom Ogden

The announcement of the intentions of the Weber County Oil and Natural Gas company in this issue of this paper is of more than passing interest to Ogden citizens. It is a matter of common knowledge to dozens of residents that natural gas exists in and around this city. The development of this product into paying quantities will solve the cheap power question for Ogden and will be the means of bringing more factories to our city.

An earnest endeavor has never been made to test out this field and the announcement of the company that "they will drill 3,000 feet, if necessary," seems to indicate that they are determined to fully investigate whether or not oil and gas lies close to Ogden in paying quantities.

Dr. J. W. Phipps, one of the moving spirits in the company, said, "We did not go into this matter until we had first thoroughly investigated the possibilities. Nor did we rest with this investigation, for we have, within the past month, had several practical oil and gas men here from other fields and they are all of the opinion that we have a most excellent field and that the surface indications are of the best. As one of them from Oklahoma said to me recently, if this was a mine proposition with so many evidences apparent to the naked eye it would look mighty good to the miner, and he could see no reason why we could not drill into a big deposit of oil or gas, for he was thoroughly satisfied that it lay close around here."

"I have often been told that the gas now burning in the various driven wells around here was marsh gas and I put this up to all of the men who have had wide experience in this line and they just laughed at me and said it was their belief that there was no foundation for this belief."

"One of the men who has associated himself with us from Oklahoma told me last week that if he could transfer our leases and surface indications to the Oklahoma field that he could get a million dollars on them in a few hours, but I am glad they are around Ogden, for I feel that it will be the means of creating the biggest business boom we ever had if we can strike oil or gas here."

OVERHEAD MOTOR COME TO STAY

Manager Frank Malan of the Goodale-Scoville company states that there is no question but that the overhead valve motor installed in the Grant-Six has come to stay and that it is having its day. Speaking of the feature he has the following to say:

Today all men agree that bore for bore and stroke for stroke, motors of the overhead valve type deliver maximum power—and are all-around most efficient.

The reasons for these facts are clear and positive:

First—Valve-in-the-head design motors utilize more of the heat generated in the cylinders, lose less of it than any other type—and motor heat is motor power.

Second—In valve-in-the-head construction the force of the explosion is exerted directly downward on the top of the pistons.

Third—The larger and more direct passages to and from the valves, and the absence of nooks and crannies where burned gases can lurk instead of being expelled, permits better cleaning of the cylinders after each explosion.

PRAYER FLAGS OF THASA, TIBET

Encircling the buildings of Thasa, Tibet, is the Sacred Road, merely to walk along which absolves the mortal from all earthly sins, and many pilgrims prostrate themselves for its entire length, thus securing everlasting happiness in their future life.

The most interesting portion of the Sacred Road is where it runs through some sharp limestone rocks, carved deeply with figures of Buddha painted many colors.

From the rocks prayer flags are suspended on lines running to an island in the river. These prayers are universal in Tibet, and so long as they are moving they are recording prayers for the benefit of those who put them up.

All devotees, men and women, walk, always turning a small hand prayer wheel, filled with minute prayers, printed on thin paper, and larger prayer wheels filled in some cases with tons of paper prayers, are set revolving by the devout, or are some-
